Miriam Miranda speaks about:

the history of the Garífuna people in northern Honduras; and about the negative impacts, repression and human rights violations caused by the 2009 U.S. and Canadian-backed military coup; by the Canadian and U.S. driven tourism industry (including discussion of the role of Randy Jorgensen, the Canadian “porn king”); by the U.S. led “war on drugs”; and by climate change and the resultant repression and human rights violations caused by the African palm production industry and hydro-electric dam building industries; the long history of U.S. domination in Honduras;
